After 1 million listens on Spotify – new album from Nils Janson

He has over one million listens on Spotify, tours all over the world – but he is almost completely unknown in his homeland Sweden.

Trumpet player Nils Janson is back with his third album, Alloy, which mixes modern grooves, Northern moods and jazz improvisation of the highest standard.

Nils Janson's song Apollo has at this moment been played 1 244 827 times on the streaming site Spotify.

Incredible numbers for a Swedish jazz musician. Most of the listeners are located in Manhattan, Los Angeles, London and Istanbul – besides Janson's tune the playlist consists of tunes by Miles Davis, Stan Getz, Coltrane, Rollins and Ellington.

His new CD, Alloy, shows a deep knowledge of the jazz tradition combined with a modern and progressive curiosity. The same could be said of Nils Janson, who has developed into one of Sweden's most exciting voices in jazz.

About Nils Janson: Trumpet player who has for many years been playing with the biggest names in Swedish jazz. He also toured with Mando Diao, one of Sweden's biggest rock bands. Nils has toured all over the world, from China and Brazil to South Africa and the USA.

At his early twenties Nils was a member of the Fredrik Norén Band, a sort of counterpart to Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers. The FNB was instrumental in introducing young jazz musicians like Fredrik Ljungqvist, Esbjörn Svensson and Daniel Karlsson (Oddjob) to the greater public.

Besides Nils Janson the musicians on Alloy are:

Jonas Östholm (piano)
Sebastian Ågren (drums)
Pär-Ola Landin (bass)
